

August 13, 2012

Signs Are Up at 93 Worth; Houseboat Tour Repeats

TRIBECA—Office-building-gone-condo 93 Worth Street is just a few months away from its on-the-market date, and it wants the world to know! The building had its signage installed last week, and the teaser website is up, too. There will be studios through four-bedrooms, and if the pricing questions on the teaser site are anything to go by, they will be for sale, not, as we'd previously heard, for rent. [CurbedWire Inbox; previously]

ON THE WATER—Miss your chance to tour the 1907 Yankee ferry yesterday? The houseboat—the last remaining Ellis Island Ferry that was used during World War II—will be open to the public again this coming Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m.. [CurbedWire Staff; previously]